

THE EMOTION OF LOVE

PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDY OF LOVE

Cesar Liendo
& Alex Nieves
Psych 201

HOME PAGE

AGAPE & PHILOS

STORGE & EROS

EPITHUMIA & MANIA

PRAGMA & LUDUS

MORE ON LOVE

Love Styles

Quick Guide:

Agape:

Sacrificing & Pure Love

Philos:

Love of Siblings

Storge:

Familial & Friendly

Eros:

Sacrificing & Intimate & Romantic

Epithumia:

Desire & Lust

Mania:

Selfish & Obsessive

Pragma:

Rational & Practical

Ludus:

Players & Swingers

Not All Love is the Same.

Studying the Types of from a Psychological Standpoint.

No really, Haddaway, What is Love?

Aside from the corny joke, Love is just one of many emotions that we feel. But this emotion isn't just another boring old emotion. No, love is a driving force that guides us. It makes us ecstatic, and miserable. Homer decribed the Trojan War lasting ten years. Whether fictional or not, it had all started over a woman. The Beatles sung about it, Shakespeare wrote about it, and every teenage girl on this planet Earth has tweeted about their fever for Bieber at one point or another.

But anyways, when we hear love we ussually associate it with Eros Love. This is the romantic love we feel with those who we are intimate with. Other than that, we may also think of the love we feel with a family member like your sister, mother, father and so on. Can you think of anymore?

If not, it's okay. We've got you. With this website, wheather you're using it for school or because you're a curious creature, you'll read briefly about the different types of love categorized. This includes agape, philos, storge, eros, epithumia, mania, pragmati, and ludus love. So grab your snuggie, your hot cocoa and read on kiddos!

